

JACK McALLISTER, a braver cyclone
my nod was borne from the ring on the shoulders of his second.
To canvas the rounds in detail is needless. To analyze the cause of victory and defeat is more to the purpose.

Any close observer of man, any keen student of human impulse, saw at the outset that in his heart Myer did not expect to defeat his opponent. There was in his stoical face no glint of hard-resolve. He was there because the match was made; because he had been trained for the encounter; because others, if not himself, believed there was a chance for him to succeed. The two men are scarcely to be compared as to scientific form, one shambling, the other trol' firmly; one slouched loosely as he squared away, the other was alert, springy, confident.

The offensive throughout the battle was assumed by McAniff. Myer to be sure, but occasionally. He could not always stand and wait, giving his foe his own time for rest. When in the second round McAniff knocked his man down twice, there came into Myer's face an expression born in his hopeless heart at the onset. When in the third round McAniff caught

Myer on the right cheek and the blood trickled down his face, there came into the eyes of Myer a look like that dumb animals give to those whom they acknowledge their masters.

He would light, then, say, but to win was not in Myer's hands—before history and he knew it. Time, however, no one will deny, but his sallies were generally short and his walloping anatomy held in it no power to stay or stop his opponent. The taunting smile on McAniff's face was met by Myer with an expression of pitiful willingness to endure as long as he could. He had no steel in his muscles. There was no vicious spring in his limbs. It was the spectacle of a sleek, forceful racer matched for a race of speed and endurance with a patient, heavy-backed horse from the farm-yard.

When in the fifth-year and last round McAniff started his flats on Myer's stomach, face and neck the willing fellow he struck back to the knees, reeled backward, recovered and lurched forward as though to rise. It was impossible. The dumb helplessness of the second round was noticeable. He fell back upon the ropes, balanced, swerved and fell.

McAniff sprang in his arms. It was the spectacle of a sleek, forceful racer matched for a race of speed and endurance with a patient, heavy-boned horse from the farm-yard.

When in the fifteenth and last round McAniff started his fists on Myer's stomach, face and neck the willing foal reared back to his knees, reeled backward, recovered and lurched forward as though to rise. It was impossible. The dumb helplessness of the second round was noticeable. He fell back upon the ropes, balanced, swerved and fell.

Meanwhile, as though made of steel springs, McAniff stood with arms in the air, his stride down again, his heavy head thrown up, his eyes fixed but the ten seconds passed, and the shouts of victory broke forth.

Myer lay defeated, but no more surely defeated than when he entered the ring. The difference was that exhaustion and bruises had been added to the defeat that lay in his heart when time was called. Myer is not of a class to fight a life and, as the result of the fight is the demonstration of the fact.

BIG WINNING

Meanwhile, as though made of steel springs, McCalliffe stood with arms in position to spring down again, his heavy legs should be high, but the seconds passed, and the shouts of victory broke forth.

Myer lay defeated, but no more surely defeated than when he entered the ring. The difference was that exhaustion and bruises had been added to the defeat that lay in his heart when time was called. Myer is not of a class to meet a terrific onslaught, and the result of the fight is the demonstration of the fact.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 6.—John Engazgi, better known as "O'Jago John," and his partner, a man named Davis, came here
 Monday to see the three big fights.
 Instead of being in to witness the first pugilistic struggle, they were languishing behind the bars in the parish prison.
 Sunday night "O'Jago John" and his friend, Davis, dropped in at
 No. 11 Laurel street, where a crap game is in full blast. Before they had been there long they seemed blessed with phenomenal luck, and made sad impudgs on the bank-roll. In a short time they had nearly $10,000 worth of checks in front of them, and there came the shocker.—The three big fights were the men of putting in "petioes" or crooked dice. All their dishonest earnings were confiscated, and both men arrested. They are still in jail.

In a short while they had nearly $10,000 worth of checks in front of them, and there came a "chiller." The three keepers accused the men of putting in "roties," or crooked dice. All their dishonest earnings were confiscated and both men arrested. They are still in jail.

A SILENT PRISONER.

COLUMBUS, N. D., Sept. 6.—James Bell, a Colar, awaiting trial, escaped from the county jail here, Monday morning, in a clever manner. He was employed to pass coffee left down from the kitchen in a dumb waiter, among the cell occupants. While James Sheddley's attention was imperiously drawn to the dumb waiter, the cunning building fell stepped into the dumb waiter and was trapped up. He gave the usual raps, and the kitchen matron, supposing more coffee was wanted, opened the door, when Bell pushed out to liberty. He was pursued but escaped, and is still at large, his pursuer in the labor day crowd.

Murderous Sports.

Minneapolis, Tenn., Sept. 6.—Two well-dressed men appeared at a sports and picnic at New Blaine, tried to buy pass coffee left down from the kitchen in a dumb waiter, among the cell occupants. While Jailer Sheekley's attention was temporarily drawn to another part of the building, they slipped into the dumb waiter and walked up. He gave the usual raps, and the kitchen matron, supposing more coffee was wanted, opened the door, when Elton dashed out to liberty. He was pursued by two bayonets, but eluded his pursuers in the labor day crowd.

Hazardous Sports.

Marysville, Tues., Sept. 6.—Two well-dressed men appeared to try sports on our new New Orleans, tried to beat each other on N. & M. V. train at Oceanview. Deputy U. S. Marshal Lloyd thought to arrest the men when they threw postels and broom, one fell killing a fatal wound. The men escaped.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6.—The following is a condensation of President Harrison's letter acknowledging the nomination of James H. Mc-Closkey for president of the United States:
WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 5, 1892.
SIR:—I have the honor to acknowledge the honorable and distinguished Mr. McCloskey, of the first period of relief from public duties to respond to the nomination which you brought me in and to express my appreciation of the action of president of the United States by the Republican national convention, recently held at Minneapolis.
I accept the nomination and am grateful for the approval expressed by the convention of the acts of the administration. The great work of the administration has been accomplished to the revision of a democratic house of representatives, and the acts of the executive department to its scrutiny and investigation. A democratic national administration was succeeded by a republican administration, and the pressures of events give unusual facilities for fair comparison of the two administrations.
There has seldom been a time, I think, when a change
from the declared policies of the democratic which affects legislation as the States may adopt, a different local bank laws. Only three States in the last years have been able to recover their money and losses attendant upon the use of such money, can appreciate what the reason is that system involves.

There are, however, a few subjects have elicited more discussion or excited more general interest than that of a recovery by the United States of its appropriate share of the money lost by the States.

It is not only our people, but our national pride, in speaking of the establishment of lines of demarcation between the States.

Mr. Cleveland declares that the democratic party was found no place in its platform for any mention of this important subject, and has been obliged to make a special reference to it, in order to expend an appropriation made during the last administration for ocean cable contracts with America.

Mr. Cleveland's statement in regard to the reciprocity policy, is known in general operation, he says, with five of the States, the United States, the British West India Islands, and with Denmark and Austria, under special trade arrangements with each of these.

We are very anxious to realize the benefit of these trade arrangements. The work of creating a new market is necessary. When that is done, the results are easily attained as such I am sure, and the results are the result of a policy of reciprocity, based upon the free importation of commodities, not injuriously to our own interests, the products of our own farms.

During the last administration for ocean mineral contracts with American lines. The United States has a strong advantage in regard to the reciprocity policy. It is now in operational operation, he says, with five of the world's great nations—Great Britain, Colombia, the Spanish and British West India islands and with Denmark and Austria, under the same trade arrangements with each line.

We intensely desire to realize the benefit of these trade agreements. The work of creating a new marine has necessarily taken time, but the results are only attained as such. I am sure that the United States will be able to reciprocate, based upon the free information of characteristics do not injuriously affect the products of our own farms, and that the United States will be able to favor in a direction of our products into other countries.

The American Association of the platform in favor of the American line of protection meets my most hearty approval. The convention did not adopt a slogan, but a principle that is in conformity with the principles of reciprocity. Holding this view can not cancel, nor a democratic president approve, any tariff schedule the purpose of effect of which is to put an important factor in the balance of trade. I am a farmer and producer in a lonely village. I judge, however, to the number under this view of the matter, and I am sure that the United States will get the revenue for its navy only on the limitation. I hope, of course, fills under this definition for its object and effect is not to put a tariff on the products of our own farms, the products of which are wholly to our

It is true, however, un-American doctrine was not held or taught by the historic democratic nations whose names as American patriots have reached this generation—certainly not by the United States. The doctrine was first an American step; the latter applied to American manufacturers, the presentist distillation of every sort of the opening of the tin plate industry, the failure of protection by Britain. It is as surprising as they are dramatic. It is to the Unhappy Industry the president says: In spite of the doubts caused by the elections of 1890, and of the fact that the tariff is not a protection to their money, the tinplate industry has been established in the United States, and the tariff is not a protection to their money. The democratic party for its destruction will not succeed. The tariff returns to the treasury department of the production of the tin and for the tinplate industry. The tinplate industry in 1890 shows a total production of 12,500,000 pounds, and a comparison of the first quarter of 1891 with the first quarter of 1890 shows the rapid development of the industry. Over 600,000 pounds during the last quarter were made from American glass plates and the tinplate industry.

No intelligent advocate of protective tariff claims that it is able to maintain a uniform rate of wages without any other effect, and that it is a source of demand for the products of labor. But it is confidently claimed that protective duties strongly tend to hold up the price of labor, and to prevent against a reduction to the European scale.

It is thoroughly convinced that the free

He said, however, that he would allow the house to vote upon the question. Mr. Franco was called to the floor and asked to read the bill. He held that it was a member's constitutional right to demand a reading of a paper before the house, and that not even a majority could deprive a member of that right. He then read the bill against putting on the journal what he had ruled out of order on Saturday. The paper was then read and the house voted 50 to 25. The journal was then adopted.

FRANKFURT, Aug. 30.—SENATE.—Mr. Anderson, from the committee on courts of justice, reported a bill to amend the laws relating to the fiscal courts. Senator Stewart offered a resolution declaring an emergency for the session and also offered a motion to postpone the consideration of some apparent amendments. Senator Goebel presented the written report of the corporation committee, recommending the passage of the bill. The senate then voted on the veto. Senators Alexander and McCann signed a minority report. After some little talk and a few preliminary motions, a division was called for. The majority voted that the veto should pass, the veto to the contrary notwithstanding, and it was decided in the affirmative by a vote of 17 to 10.

HOUSE.—The house held morning and afternoon sessions to-day, and the whole time was consumed in discussing the veto of the revenue bill. The majority of the house took the same argument in favor of the veto. Mr. Dickerson in favor of passing the bill over the governor's objection. The minority took the same argument, but others spoke in favor of retaining the veto. A vote may be reached

After some little talk and a few preliminary motions, a vote was taken. The result was a tie. The speaker should pass the veto to the contrary motion, and it was decided in the affirmative by a majority of one.

HOUSE.—The house held morning and afternoon sessions to-day, and the whole time was consumed in discussing the veto of the revenue bill. The speaker made a long and able argument in favor of the veto. Mr. Dickerson spoke in favor of passing the bill over the president's veto. Mr. Dickerson was supported by Mr. Thompson and others opposed in favor of sustaining the veto. A vote may be reached to-morrow. The house took a breaching spell from 12 to 1 o'clock, and will visit the state legislature hall on Friday.

FRANKFORD, Aug. 31.—SENATE.—Mr. Breckinridge introduced a new bill on pensions, and referred to the judiciary committee. An effort was made to adjourn till Saturday, the senate adjourning at 12 o'clock. The speaker announced that the action of the senate yesterday in passing the bill over the veto now prevented the senate from introducing a new corporation bill. The speaker then introduced a bill on the governor's veto, and that it would be carried anywhere from sixty to ninety days on the new revenue bill. Most of this time the August session will be idle. The senate today adjourned till to-morrow.

PHRANKFORD, N.Y., Sept. 1.—The house of representatives approved the adverse report today by a vote of 197 to 106 against it. The bill was passed after the corporation bill, and refused to pass it over the governor's veto by a vote of 112 to 87. Mr. Tallie, alliance member from Bayview, reintroduced the bill at 1 o'clock Monday morning. It was printed and recommended to the committee. It will now be passed by the constitutional convention. A bill prepared by the same committee, which was introduced last week, was introduced Thursday, read and ordered printed. Mr. McHard claims that it is the best bill yet introduced. It contains provision of the governor's and the pet features of those who cling to the vetoed bill. Both measures poured over till 11 o'clock Monday night and attended the Lexington fair to-day.

What Some Things Have Cost.
From Harper's Young People.
The magnificent national Capitol at Washington has cost, since the laying of its cornerstone in 1793, very nearly $13,000,000, but the State Capitol of New York at Albany, although not yet completed according to the architect's designs, has already cost almost $20,000,000, and is the most expensive building of modern times.

The largest and most expensive City Hall in the United States is that of Philadelphia, and its principal tower is to contain the largest clock in the world.

The greatest price ever paid for a horse was $150,000, given by Mr. Malcom Forbes, of Boston, for Arion, which he bought from Senator Stanford, of California. Arion, the trotter, brought $105,000 when three years old, while in 1891 St. Blaise was sold for $100,000.

One hundred and three thousand dollars has been offered and refused for a Hebrew Bible now in the library of the Vatican at Rome. This makes it the most valuable book in the world, so far as dollars and cents go.

In 1855, when the entire Dutch nation was crazy upon the subject of tulips, a single bulb was sold for $2,200. At such prices it would pay better to raise tulips than to own the most valuable gold mine in the world.

Speaking of gold mines, where do you suppose the most valuable bit of ore ever smelted in the world, so far as is known, was found? In California or Australia or India? No, indeed. It was a lot containing 200 pounds of quartz-holding gold at the rate of $50,000 per ton, and was found in a mine at Ishpeming, Michigan.

The costliest cigars ever exported from Havana were a quantity made expressly for the Prince of Wales, and valued at $1.57 apiece in the factory.

The largest sum ever asked or offered for a single diamond was $21,500,000, which the Prince of Hyderabad, in India, agreed to give the jeweler who then owned the Imperial, which is considered the finest stone in the world.

The Shah of Persia and the Sultan of Turkey each possesses a prayer mat, or rug, made of diamonds and pearls and valued at something over $2,500,000 apiece. The largest and most expensive rug in the world, made of the ordinary materials of which such things are manufactured, is owned by the Carlton Club of London.

A broken wooden horse, with which Napoleon Bonaparte played when a child, was recently sold for 1,000 francs.

Think of paying $250,000 for a single meal! That is what a wealthy Roman once did, when he wished to impress a dozen guests with his disregard for riches.

The most valuable of modern paintings is Messner's "1814," which was bought by a Frenchman for $170,000. The same gentleman paid $150,000 for "The Angelus," by Millet, of which you all have doubtless seen photographs or other reproductions.

Parents who have young children will be interested in the experience of Mr. Alex. Morris, a prominent druggist at Brit. Iowa. He says: "During the summer of 1882, my little child, a year and a half old, was afflicted with a complaint so common to children of that age. After being treated by a physician and getting no better, I took from my shelves a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and Chloroform Remedy, which I administered for the first time in three days, and was entirely well. For due by Vinson Bros."

ADAMS, KY.
Wanted: a big rain to come. Fodder saving engages the time of some of our farmers at present. Messrs. M. Carter and one Bradley passed down our creek the other day with a fine herd of cattle, which they had purchased.

W. R. Hayes is rapidly pushing the work on his mill to completion. That the roads are dusty is undeniable.

The people of our community are delighted at the fact that a Sunday school was last Sunday evening organized at this place. The prospects of success are promising. May the efforts of our good people be crowned with divine and ample success.

"Unity" dusty roads are probably muddy now.—En.
